JERSEY CITY, Jan. 9, 1874.

Wm. P. Lyon, Esq.—DEAR SIR, Mr. E. desires me to acknowledge the receipt regularly of the SATURDAY GAZETTE. It comes to us like a letter from an absent friend, and we consider it a valuable addition to our newspaper list. I enclose some lines for publication if you so desire.

MAKING TRACKS.

By Rev. HIRAM EDDY, D.D.

A glad mother with a young child in her arms, oils the feet of the little one and sets them on a sheet of white paper. She then sends the tracks thus made to the Grand-father who returned the following:

On the shore where the ocean's sounding,
Where waves have beaten smooth the sand,
Little tracks, maiden tracks appearing,
Dimple o'er the rippled, sea-washed strand
With her tender foot that she never put
Upon the sand before.

These little tracks the stranger's making,
Slowly making on the foamy shore,
Whereon the billows wild are breaking,
Are printed there forever, ever more
With the tender foot that she never put
Upon the sand before.

These little tracks are an age increasing,
Every moment they are many more,
On she goes—stepping—stepping—stepping
Making tracks a'ong the sounding shore,
With her tender foot that she never put
Upon the sand before.

These little tracks are aye advancing,
Never turning, and return no more
Forward march! onward still she's going,
Making tracks along the eternal shore,
With her tender foot that she never put
Upon the sand before.

Father! mother! guide those helpless feet;
Guide them gently o'er life's shifting sands,
When the meadows bloom so fair and sweet;
Oh guide with prayer and loving hands
The tender foot that was never put
Upon the sand before,
We all are marching, never halting,
Charging, battling o'er life's sandy plains,
Let the tracks that we are making,
Tell the dusty, foot-sore, thoughtless trains
How to set the foot which they ever put
On sands untrod before.

Our Carcanet.

LULLABY.

Sleep, baby, sleep!
Fond eyes are watching round thy cradle bed,
Fond prayers ascend for blessings on thy head;
Fount-ains of love and hope, unknown before,
Waked by that tiny hand, and flowing o'er;
Joys long obscured by clouds of grief and pain,
At the same gentle touch appear again;
Sad, drooping hearts, have felt thy cheering power,
Angels of comfort from thine earliest hour!
Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sleep, baby, sleep!
Hast not to open those sweet violet eyes
On all the wonders of our clouded skies,—
The weariness of eve, the toil of noon,
Knowledge of good and ill, must come too soon.
All mortal joys and sorrows, hopes and fears,
Wait 'midst the shadows of future years;
But now enjoy thy portion calm and blest,—
Love deep and tender—soft and dreamless rest!
Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sleep, baby, sleep!
We will not look before;—we know that He,
Our risen Lord, was once a child like thee,
And now in Heaven, as while he sojourned here,
Still to His heart the "little ones are dear.
O, God of love and pity, hear our prayer,—
Take our frail treasure to Thy tender care!
We trust her in the shadow of Thy wings,
The last and fairest of our precious things!
Sleep, baby, sleep!

Kindness is like the sun in Spring, melting slowly away Winter's snow and ice, and shedding warmth everywhere.

VICE stings us even in our pleasures, but Virtue consoles us even in our pains.

FAITH AND WORKS.—One evening after a weary march, as Muhommed was camping with his weary followers, he overheard one of them saying, "I will loose my camel and commit it to God." "Friend," said the Prophet, "tie thy camel and commit it to God."

HAPPINESS.—President Nott, in his wise old age, once took a newly-married pair aside, and said, "I want to give you this advice my children don't try to be happy. Happiness is a shy nymph, and if you chase her you will never catch her. But just go quietly on and do your duty and she will come to you.

LOVE.

Kind hearts are the gardens,
Kind thoughts are the roots,
Kind words are the blossoms,
Kind deeds are the fruits;
Love is the sweet sunshine
That warms into life,
For only in darkness
Grow hatred and strife.

After Dinner.

A DIFFERENCE OF TASTE.—A country paper says that, in reply to a question from the lecture committee from the chief town of the district as to the subject of a lecture to be given at the institution, the lecturer telegraphed, "A Taste of Naples and Rome." The telegraph made it read, "A Taste of Apples and Rum."

Two men disputing about the pronounciation of the word "either"—one saying it was ee-ther, the other it her—agreed to refer the matter to the first person they met who happened to be an Irishman, and who counfounded both by delaring, "It's nayther, for its aythor."

Traveling along the sea-coast of Florida a gentleman, noting the barrenness of the country asked a native, "What do you live on here?" "Live on?" replied the man: "why on fish and strangers."

A young lady had coquetted until the victim was completely exhausted. He rose to go away. She whispered as she accompanied him to the door.

"I shall be at home next Sunday evening."

"So shall I," he replied.

An inveterate old bachelor says ships are called "she" because they always keep a man on the lookout.

A man asked a servant, "Is your master at home?" "No, he's out." "Your mistress?" "No, sir; she's out too." "Well, I'll just step in and take a warm at the fire till they come in." "Faith, sir, and that's out, too."

The Foo-Chow Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church is regarded as the most successful mission in China; and missionaries of all denominations are carefully inquiring into its methods to find out if possible the secret of its unexampled prosperity.

Housewifery.

HOW TO MAKE A MUSTARD PLASTER.—The ordinary way is to mix the mustard with water, tempering it with a little flour, but such a plaster as that makes is simply abominable. Before it has half done its work it begins to blister the patient, and leaves him finally with a painful, flayed spot, after having produced far less effect in a beneficial way than was intended. Now, a mustard plaster should never make a blister at all. When you make a mustard plaster, then, use no water whatever, but mix the mustard with the white of an egg, and the result will be a plaster which will "draw" perfectly, but will not produce a blister even upon the skin of an infant, no matter how long it is allowed to remain upon the part.

A mother has no right to bring up a daughter without teaching her how to keep house, and, if she has an intelligent regard for her daughter's happiness, she will pay her particular attention in this respect.

CARE OF THE HANDS.—Try a few drops of ammonia in the basin of water with which you wash your hands after your day's work is done. It has a softening and cleansing effect. Powdered borax is also excellent. Glycerine is the thing to use upon chapped hands, and cracks at the finger ends. R. R.

DOUGHNUTS.—2 cups of sugar, 1 butter or lard, 3 eggs, 2 cups of milk, 1 cup of sponge, warm milk and butter; beat eggs and sugar together, knead soft over night; next morning roll and cut out, letting them stand an hour or more till perfectly tight, then fry. Spice with cinnamon and nutmeg.

OF AUTHORS.

The most learned men are not the most fluent in conversation. Christopher North ridicules a dinner table distinguished by the literary type of its guests. Even poets, he says, "are a sulky set, and as gruffly and grimly silent as if they had the toothache or something the matter wi' their inside." Sir Walter Scott could not endure the "little exclusive circles of literary society." He often complained, says Jacox, "of the real dullness of parties where each guest arrived under the implied and tacit obligation of exhibiting some extraordinary powers of talk or wit." I have heard Guziot talk, and his words flow as readily as if they were in his memory and not to be found for the occasion.

Guizot says of Gibbon that his great conversational defect was a studied arrangement of his words—that he talked like a book.

M. de Tocqueville was remarkable for the purity of his language in the most familiar conversation.

Emerson is one of the profoundest thinkers, but he is very simple in his conversation; he is child-like in his simplicity, or to use his own words, speaking of another, he is "grandly simple." I have listened to him wondering that while the depths are so great there is so little on the surface, yet that little so beautiful.

The most learned woman it was ever my good fortune to meet, and probably the most learned woman who ever lived, was Mrs. Somerville, the mathematician, astronomer and philosopher. In fact she was encyclopedic. She has but recently died, at the age of about ninety.

In 1853 I met her in Florence; she was then 73 years old, and in the prime of life and mental vigor. Her bust in marble had before that time been placed by the side of Sir Isaac Newton's, and no one more justly deserves the honor. But she was as simply natural and as easily graceful in her conversation as if she had never calculated an eclipse since she was the reigning belle in Scotland, admired for her beauty and accomplishments, but not suspected of genius or learning, and unthinking of fame.

Mrs. Browning was herself an illustration of the truth that one may be full of thought, reading and genius, and as readily social and agreeable as if she were no greater than those with whom she conversed.

One of the most genial and pleasant old men I ever met of the race of authors, was the poet James Montgomery. he was so old when I saw him in his own house in Sheffield, that I would not have looked for vivacity and humor in his conversation; but he was very lively in his manner, and when he gave me his birth-day and it proved to be mine also, and then his age, which was the double of mine to a day, the coincidences were welcomed with mutual and great delight.

Of all the authors of whom I have written in this letter not one is now among the living except Guizot. He is nearly ninety years of age, and declines going as Ambassad or to England because he is too busy writing a book, and prefers to stay at home and play with his grand-children.—Rev. Dr. S. I. Prime

JURY TRIAL IN AUSTRIA.—The new procedure, under which the institution of trial by jury is to be introduced generally in all criminal cases, will come into force on the 1st of January. A new regulation on the subject for the use of public prosecutors, has just been issued by the Minister of Justice. In this regulation it is laid down as a fundamental principle that public prosecutors should not take up the position as counsel against the accused, but that it is their duty to consider with equal care all the circumstances of the case whether they tell against the accused or in his favor. The Minister next points out that everything which might have the appearance of partiality toward individuals or toward this or that society, should be carefully avoided. The only feeling, the Minister concludes, which public prosecutors should always endeavor to awaken among the jury is the feeling of duty. It should always be impressed upon them when necessary that they have no right to give an arbitrary verdict, to improve supposed defects in the law, or to decide in accordance with their political, national, or religious opinions; all they have to consider is how to do strict and impartial justice.

THE APPROACHING ROYAL MARRIAGE.—It is proposed that the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh after their marriage should make a state entry into London. The Queen herself is favorable to this idea, but it has met with some unexpected opposition from other persons in high quarters. It is believed, however, that there is every probability that a "national welcome" will be offered in this form to the daughter of the Emperor of Russia, and that we shall once again witness a repetition of the spectacle which took place on the entrance of the Princess Alexandria into London. There is to be a great illumination of the metropolis on the day of the marriage.
